START A CLIPPING BUREAU FOR ILLUSTRATIONS Since it is not practical to retain a mass of periodicals in which a great variety of illustrated work is buried, a method of clipping and filing must be followed. One publication may have a single illustration of an interior which is a good model for lighting, position of people or other details. Portrait examples, page makeup, especially effective uses of colored inks and fine examples of two-colorplate making, can be readily acquired in considerable quantity. As a small matter, but one which has much to do with the clean effect of a dummy, it will be found that illustrations trimmed so as to bleed slightly will be much better than if even the slightest showing is left of the original margin. If you want a dummy to lie as flat as possible and to avoid the...
