Excerpt: . . . in November, 1758, the latter in May, 1766. Dr. Warrens progress as a physician was unusually rapid. Not only had he the influence and recommendation of his father-in-law Dr. Shaw to advance his interests, but those also of Sir Edward Wilmot. Shortly after he commenced practice, Sir Edward, then physician to the court and much employed among the nobility, was in attendance on the princess Amelia, daughter of George the Second. Sir Edward, then advanced in years and looking to retirement, proposed Dr. Warren as an assistant, to attend to the more minute and arduous duties required by the princess, who was subject to sudden seizures that created alarm. At the commencement of his professional career, Dr. Warren, during three summers, went to Tunbridge Wells, and on two of these occasions her royal highness visited that watering place under his care. On the retirement of Sir Edward WVi1mot, Dr. Warren continued physician to the princess, and one of the rewards bestowed upon him was the appointment of physician to George the Third, which was procured for him by her royal highness influence on the resignation of his fatherin-law Dr. Shaw. Dr. Warrens eminence is not to be ascribed, however, to mere patronage, nor to singularity of doctrine, nor to the arts of a showy address, nor to any capricious revolution of Eortunes wheel; it was the just and natural attainment of great talents. These talents, indeed, cannot be subjected to the scrutiny of literary...
